2. The manuscript contains original research work, free from plagiarism and the other unethical attitude.
3. At the time of manuscript submission, the author must ensure that the manuscript has not been published in the other periodical journals.

Manuscript Systematics:

1. Title. The title should be brief, describe the uniqueness of the research, not exceed 20 words, and should begin with capitalized letter each word.
2. Author's name and affiliation. The author's name should be included by affiliation (write completely) and email address, without the academic title.
3. Abstract. Abstract is written in English, one paragraph with single spacing (maximum 250 words) without any references or formulas. Keywords consist of 3-5 words or phrases (alphabetically). The abstract contains of a brief description of the research background (maximum two sentences), aims, methods, main results, and conclusion.
4. Introduction. Introduction is written without numbers and/or pointers. This section consists of (i) nature and scope of the problem on a broader (national, regional, international) context, (ii) review of relevant literatures, (iii) significance/novelty/contribution of this research on knowledge, (iv) aims of this research. If there is a hypothesis, declare it explicitly and not in an interrogative sentence. It should be written efficiently and supported by references. Extensive discussion of relevant literatures should be included in the discussion, not in the introduction.
5. Research Method. This section should explain how the research conducted. It should be written clearly and completely containing a clear description of (i) population and sampling, (ii) data measuring and collecting, (iii) variable and data analysis. This research method should sufficiently detail. For qualitative research, please adjusted this method to your scientific writing habits while considering the repeatability of your research. It was not necessary to write commonly analysis methods (e.g., F-test formula, t-test), but just referred your source. References of original methods/procedures must be stated, and all modifications of procedures (if any) should be explained. Symbol description of the model was suggested to be written on narration.
6. Result and Discussion. In the beginning of results and discussion is presented the data, facts which you had found, calculated, and discovered. Data should be presented in Tables or Figures when feasible. Table should be clear and stood alone giving complete information although without text. The title of Table and Figure should be briefly and clearly described the facts which you described. Symbols written in Table and Figure should be given a complete information and allowed the reader to interpret the results. Each Figure and Table must be referred to in the narration. In the rest of section, you must write a discussion of your research findings.
7. Conclusion. This section is summarize your principal findings and written briefly. Conclusion related to the introduction and aims or hypothesis but did not repeat the discussion. Conclusion written critically, logically, and honestly based on the existing fact, and full of cautions if there was a generalization. A recommendation showed the significance of your results/findings or practical application of this findings. This section, written in paragraph form, do not use numbering or bullets.

8. Acknowledgments (if necessary). This section provided for the authors to deliver their gratitude to the research funder, facility, or the suggestion, and for the statement, if the article is part of the thesis/dissertation.
9. References. The reference contains the list of journals, books, or other publications referred in this manuscript. Each reference cited in the text must be listed in references, and vice versa.
